

FENDI

las vegas, nv

The Fendi store in The Forum Shops at Caesar's Palace is a prime example of how Stromberg Architectural Products takes care of all the needs of builders, both large and small. While outside on the front of the Caesar's Palace edifice, Stromberg columns stand as the tallest in the world. Meanwhile gracing the Fendi storefront inside the adjacent shopping center, other columns by Stromberg stand at not much taller than the height of a man. Both examples are standing proof of Stromberg's dedication to quality. The Fendi frontage is also topped off with Stromberg molding and a dome to finish out the thematic ambience.

Stromberg is unmatched in the market for producing true-to-historical-detail accents such as columns, domes, bas relief or any other architectural accent from any period. Stromberg has the 100,000 square foot production space necessary to accomplish any project large or small. Not only does Stromberg have the capacity to recreate any genre of design, we also have the availability of materials that can provide durability that the ancient Romans could only dream of.
